Design a Butterfly Garden - July 26

Many North Shore residents consider gardening a myth. But in reality, even with narrow windows of growing opportunities, there are many ways to have a successful garden and reap the rewards it brings. One of those ways is to pick a specific species of visitor and design the garden just for them.

Pat Thomas knows all about that, and manages to create some spectacular butterfly gardens. In fact, she'll be sharing her knowledge on July 26 at a special class in the Larsmont Schoolhouse from 10 a.m. to noon.

"Your yard and gardens can be havens for butterflies," she says. "This class will teach you how to create and manage butterfly habitat right in your back yard. You will learn about the butterfly life cycle, the best plants for these beautiful insects and other ways to provide for butterflies."

Although the class is open to anyone who walks through the door on July 26, preregistration is appreciated in order to have proper materials on hand. "There are no limits on enrollment," she says, "but it would be nice to know the number of people who plan on attending since I will have handouts."

The cost of the class is $5, which will be donated to the Xerces Society, an invertebrate conservation group. People can email Pat at 55path57@gmail.com then can pay on the day of the class. "If folks do not have email, they can simply come that day."

Pat's yard is certified with the National Wildlife Federation, The North American Butterfly Association, the Xerces Society and is registered as a Monarch Way Station. The butterfly class is one element of the year-long Schoolhouse Centennial Celebration.

Centennial Celebration - August 23-24

The highlight of the Larsmont Schoolhouse Centennial celebration this year will be a weekend filled with arts and crafts, performances, demonstrations, food and ice cream. The Schoolhouse Centennial committee has designated August 23-24 as a two-day "throwback" weekend (1914-1925'ish dress will be optional).

First, you'll want your friends to arrive in style. Arrangements have been made with the North Shore Scenic Railroad to make a special stop in Larsmont at the site of the old train depot. Go to the Calendar at Larsmont.org to find links for rides on August 23 and August 24. Ride to the Schoolhouse from the train aboard a horse and buggy. Or, stroll to the school grounds.

Both days will be filled with musical performances by area groups. Vendor tents will provide insight into period merchandise.

Paul von Goertz of Knife River plans to perform a reenactment with old "veterans," who will talk about the Civil War and Minnesota's involvement in it.

And, there will be more. Now's the time to put this weekend on your family's calendar.

Rummage Sale City, U.S.A.

One of the benefits of membership in the Larsmont Community Club is the free use of the Larsmont Schoolhouse building once a year. Many Larsmont residents and visitors take advantage of that benefit by holding rummage sales. In fact, it's become enough of a practice that we're beginning to call Larsmont Rummage Sale City.

When you think of it, using the Schoolhouse makes perfect sense. It's a beautiful, well-maintained building, plus you have the advantage of a protected display area, and also the expandability to the surrounding grounds.

This summer, rummage sales are already scheduled for June 27-29 (Isackson/Schleeter), July 4-6 (Crassweller) and July 11-13 (Erickson). Some families, like the Isacksons and Schleeters, work together to make the events even more of a success.

The rummage sales are elements of the year-long Schoolhouse Centennial Celebration.

Larsmont Yesterday - a History [Pt. 5]

The following is the fourth excerpt as written and illustrated from the short history book Larsmont Yesterday, written by Oliver Isackson (1906-1970) and published in July 1980 by Irene Hill Norgard. Part 1 was published in the Summer 2011 edition of The Larsmont Line, Part 2 was published in the Spring 2013 edition, Part 3 in the Summer 2013 edition and Part 4 in the Spring 2014 edition, all available online at www.Larsmont.org.

MISCELLANEOUS

The early days were not without tragedies, as well as many happy occasions, of course. The first known casualty was the death of the father of the Thompson brothers, who was killed on the railroad crossing at the site of the depot. In 1909, a forest fire raged all along the lakeshore. During the summer 1911, Victor Sjoblom lost two cows that had wandered onto the railroad track and were struck by the train. This was a great loss to them.

On April 29, 1914, Esther Strom, aged 18, died in a Duluth hospital following surgery, and was buried in Duluth. On October 29, 1915, the post office in the John Strom home was robbed while everyone was attending a meeting at the schoolhouse. On March 17, 1918, little Ina Linnes Hendrickson, 1½ years old, drowned in their well. The funeral was held in the schoolhouse. On January 26, 1919, two-month-old Victor Daniel Sjoblom died, and the funeral was held at the schoolhouse.

In February of 1918, the Carl Wahlberg home was burned to the ground in a snow storm.

October 12, 1918, was the great forest fire, when those living on the hillside took refuge in the homes along the shore. The only place it crossed the tracks was at the Hickox place, which was burned down. Peter Villa sat smoking his pipe on a haystack while watching his house burn down! Six cars of Home Guards from Two Harbors came to help in fighting the fire. The last forest fire in this area was in April 1953, and it was then that the Larsmont Volunteer Fire Department was organized.

On June 7, 1919, Andrew Barthell went to Duluth and died while walking on the sidewalk. His funeral service was held at the schoolhouse.

Once some Larsmont fishermen were trapped on the ice and were rescued by the tug Edna G. of Two Harbors.

In 1919, the schoolhouse was closed from November 20 to December 15 because of the Spanish Flue, which had invaded every home. Out of a population of 104 persons, 56 were bedridden. Fortunately there were no deaths. At that time, Jennie Strom, who later became a foreign missionary, went from home to home caring for the sick. Later on, the community gave her a surprise party to show their appreciation. They had collected $18. Mrs. Peter Erickson also carried soup to the sick and milked their cows.

One day in the early '20s, little George Wahlberg, age 5, decided he was going to help his father out in the potato field, some distance from the house, and so informed his mother. Somewhere along the way he took a wrong turn and ended up in the woods. After several hours, his parents discovered he was missing and sounded the alarm. Men from Larsmont as well as Two Harbors came to help in the search. In the meantime, George had walked for several miles, crossed the Knife River (fortunately it was very low at the time) and ended up at a strange house. The lady tried to find out who this little boy was, even coaxed him with candy, but since George could only speak Swedish yet, and the lady only spoke English, she got nowhere with him. The story had a happy ending, however. Later that day the searchers found George and reunited him with his parents. The only thing that impressed him was the bag of candy the nice lady had given him!

Other tragedies occurred in later years. Arvid Johnson was accidentally killed near Two Harbors in 1927. Helmer Hill died of diabetes in 1931 at the age of 15. Edwin Evenson, husband of Elsie Strom, was struck by a train while crossing the tracks in a truck, in 1932, and was instantly killed. Roger Johnson died of tularemia in 1932. Harry Hill, 19, died of injuries sustained in an auto accident on the highway near Larsmont in January 1940. Glen, the young son of the Elof Andersons, was struck and killed by a car while riding his bike on the highway near their home, in 1953. One of our very first settlers, Louis Thompson, died on February 17, 1939. Several of our Larsmont youths died in the prime of life, either accidentally or from illness: John Coson, Dick Nyquist, Wilbert Wahlberg, Clifford Wahlberg and Edwin Sjoblom.

On the other hand, a number of our residents lived to be more than 90 years of age: John Nyquist, Eric Johnson and Albert Montague all reached the age of 92; Barbara Lounsberry died at 97 and Ole H. Isackson was 98.

Among the happier occasions were: A surprise party given for Mr. and Mrs. John Strom to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary on April 22, 1914; and a party given in the schoolhouse honoring Theodore Thompson on his 75th birthday, February 21, 1938.

Among the early home weddings in Larsmont were: Oliver and Vera (Hill) Isackson, 1927; Peter and Helen (Sjoblom) Ohlin; Charles and Margaret (Hendrickson) Whittaker, 1930. There were two weddings in the schoolhouse: William and Evodea (Barthell) Matas, and Magnus and Henrietta Jensen.

We eagerly looked forward to each wedding in Larsmont, for that meant a shivaree! No doubt more than one cow had to surrender her bell for an evening every now and then, and mothers lost their pots and pans for a while, too. Some newlyweds really made us work for our "reward," and the shivaree went on and on until they gave us some money. Then we'd buy ice cream and goodies, and go to someone's home to celebrate. The last shivaree in Larsmont was held in the early 1940s.

Other items of interest: Saxoni Erickson was born on a ship in mid-ocean, coming from Sweden in 1905. The name of the ship was Saxonia, from which he got his name.

In 1943, the Albert Montagues had a dog, part police and Great Dane, who was accepted for duty in the K-9 Corps and was awaiting shipping orders.

In 1933, David Anderson, one of the "Singing Fishermen," had a close call when his boat tipped over in the lake. He shouted to comrades Ragnvald Sannes and Helmer Hill, who eventually came to his aid. They were so far away that they thought it was a loon calling, but after a few minutes they realized that it was David.

Several celebrities have stayed in the cabins in Larsmont in years past, such as country-western singer Jeanie Seeley, the Everly Brothers and Patty Berg.
